

Differentiation for Gifted Learners: Beyond the Basics

November 9 & 10, 2016

8:30 a.m. – 3:30 p.m. (CST)

Workshop #041-17

GRREC Office and Training Facility • 230 Technology Way • Bowling Green

Dr. Richard Cash has customized a dynamic, two-day workshop in response to teacher feedback about the need for researched-based, practical application differentiation strategies for Gifted and Talented learners in the classroom, including those at the middle and high school levels. He will introduce and expand upon the concept of student self-regulation, and connect ways to address behaviors and mindsets that often manifest themselves in selective/underachievement in GT students. Knowledge and skills gained at this workshop will help both classroom teachers and instructional leaders.

Participants will:

- Deepen their understanding of how to construct effective enrichment
- Learn extension and enhancement activities for gifted learners
- Utilize advanced levels of questioning to help students sharpen their 21st century thinking skills
- Positively impact student learning at all academic levels within their schools/districts

“Dr. Richard Cash is one of the most dynamic professional development experts of our day. He has a special gift for making the connection between what is authentic and challenging for students and how these materials should be taught.”

– Dr. Joy Lawson Davis, NAGC board member, author, scholar & consultant
